Introduction

It's a defining period for Thailand's business and investment communities. Yingluck Shinawatra's Pheu Thai government faces many of the issues and legal reforms proposed to the previous Democrat coalition that were never actioned. As the ASEAN Economic Community advances ever closer and Thailand stands positioned as a lucrative new hub for Japanese, Chinese and Indian investors, reforms are pressing and many new initiatives could have big impacts on taxes, regulations, investment privileges and employment laws.

In an exclusive one-day event, Irving Seminars presents a comprehensive and authoritative update on Thailand's business legislation. Blending practical and technical perspectives from Thai and international industry leaders, we explain what the latest legal precedents may mean for your company and just what the future terrain is likely to contain. Combining detailed presentations and exclusive panel briefings, Irving Seminars covers taxes, central and Board of Investment incentives, pan-ASEAN agreements, transfer pricing and employment laws - all within practical manageable sessions.
